The twenty-teens have come to a close. Before we speed forward to all of the new gun introductions of 2020, let's take a look back, because it has been a hell of a decade for hunters and shooters. Here's a list of 23 firearms that made a lasting impact over the last 10 years.

If you told me back in 2010 that one of the most significant firearms introductions in the coming decade would be an ornately engraved over-and-under I would have head-slapped you for talking such nonsense. And yet here we are. The Revenant is remarkable because it represents a new high-water mark for a machine-made firearm. Look closely and you'll see a level of fit and finish, to say nothing of the stunning engraving, that previously was only associated with hand-built guns with price tags in the six figures. However, this shotgun is more than just a pretty face. It handles as well as it looks, embodying the fine balance and other characteristics of a London Best game gun. At $13,000, this isn't for everyone, but that doesn't make the accomplishment any less significant. —JBS
